PREFATORY NOTE

The first edition of a "List of references on reciprocity" was published in 1902 and a "Select list of books, with references to periodicals, on reciprocity with Canada," in 1907, and later a typewritten list on Cuban reciprocity was prepared. The material contained in these has now been brought together, with the addition of later literature, and grouped under the following headings:

Reciprocity in the United States [comprehensive].
Reciprocity with Canada and Newfoundland.
Reciprocity with Hawaii.
Reciprocity under the McKinley act, 1890–1894.
Reciprocity with Cuba.
Reciprocity in Great Britain and other countries.

To the general works to which special attention was directed in the first edition, such as Adams's "American economic supremacy;" Bastable's "Theory of international trade;" Chapman's "History of trade between the United Kingdom and the United States;" Rogers's "Economic interpretation of history," should now be added Ashley's "Modern tariff history;" Dietzel's "Retaliatory duties;" Fisk's "International commercial policies, with special reference to the United States," and Laughlin and Willis's "Reciprocity."

Documents and treaties.—In a subject of this kind the public documents are of the first importance, and this fact is emphasized by placing them at the head of each section. By means of them the legislative history of the reciprocity treaties or projects from the year 1815 to the present time may be traced. The texts of the various treaties and agreements are given in "Treaties, conventions . . . and agreements between the United States of America and other powers, 1776–1909" (Senate document no. 357, 61st Congress, 2d session).

The diplomatic negotiations in connection with the treaties of 1815 and 1818 with Great Britain are set forth in Lyman's "The diplomacy of the United States;" Wharton's "Digest of international law" devotes a section to the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty, and another to "Treaty regulations of reciprocity with Great Britain." Wharton is practically superseded by Moore's "Digest of international law," which discusses in addition the fate of the reciprocity treaties negotiated under the McKinley act. Foster's "A century of American diplomacy" considers the Canadian reciprocity treaty; Schuyler's

"American diplomacy and the furtherance of commerce" gives a good survey of the commercial treaties from 1794 to 1884.

Canada—The Canadian reciprocity treaty of 1854 is the subject of a monograph by F. E. Haynes, forming American economic association publication, volume 7, no. 6, and is one of the two treaties in C. Robinson's "History of two reciprocity treaties."

The following give the Canadian view of the treaty: Gray's "Confederation; or, The political and parliamentary history of Canada;" Laurence Oliphant's "Episodes of a life of adventure;" Mrs. Oliphant's "Memoir of Laurence Oliphant;" Sir E. W. Watkin's "Canada and the United States." Hopkins, "Canada; an encyclopædia of the country;" Porritt's "Sixty years of protection in Canada."

The British and Canadian parliamentary papers containing the official record of the treaty negotiations, diplomatic correspondence, etc., are given in a group immediately after the United States documents.

The movement for the abrogation of the treaty in 1864 brought out several reports, notably Derby's "Preliminary report on the treaty of reciprocity," Washington, 1866, which examined the effects of the operations under the treaty of 1854. This was reprinted in his "Letter to the Hon. William H. Seward," 1867, and in Senate executive document no. 30, 39th Congress, 2d session.

The negotiations for the renewal of the treaty in 1868–69 are discussed in Gray's "Confederation," in the Sessional papers (no. 47) of the Canadian Parliament, and in the United States documents of the period. For later negotiations the documents remain the most important sources, but the periodical literature becomes of increasing significance.

Official Canadian statistical publications to be noted are the "Tables of the trade and navigation of the Dominion of Canada" and the "Unrevised monthly statements of imports entered for consumption" and "Exports of the Dominion of Canada," both published by the department of customs; the "Annual report of the Department of trade and commerce," the "Monthly report" of the same department, and the "Statistical yearbook of Canada," issued by the Department of agriculture. Non-official publications containing material on trade relations of Canada are: "The Canadian annual review," Toronto; "The Canadian manufacturer," semi-monthly, Toronto; "The Canadian gazette," weekly, London; and "Canada," weekly, Montreal.

Reciprocity with Spanish America.—The greater part of the material under the heading "Reciprocity under the McKinley act, 1890–1894" treats of the negotiations with the Spanish American states. The minutes and reports of the International American conference, held at Washington in 1890, and Curtis's "Trade and transportation between the United States and Spanish America" afford valuable information on reciprocity with the American republics. Secretary Blaine's writings on the subject are noted in the list. Consult further the Bulletins of the International bureau of the American republics.

Among the discussions, mostly periodical, called out by the McKinley act may be mentioned Kasson's "Reciprocity," Washington, 1901; John P. Young's "Economic aspects of reciprocity," in the Protectionist, vol. 13, pp. 80–91: Brooks Adams's "Reciprocity or the alternative," in the Atlantic monthly, vol. 88, pp. 145-155; J. B. Osborne's "Expansion through reciprocity," in the Atlantic monthly, vol. 88, pp. 721–731; G. B. Waldron's "A calm view of reciprocity," in the Chautauquan, vol. 34, pp. 237–242; E. J. Gibson's "Reciprocity and the foreign trade," in the Forum, vol. 32, pp. 466–480; George Gunton's "Our industrial foreign policy," in Institute of social economics, Lecture bulletin, December 2, 1901, pp. 131–151; A. H. U. Colquhoun's "The reciprocity of to-day," in the Canadian magazine, vol. 18, pp. 226–228; John Charlton's "Reciprocity with Canada" in the Forum, vol. 32, pp. 582–593; and A. B. Farquhar's "The manufacturer's need of reciprocity," in Annals of the American academy of political and social science, vol. 19, pp. 21–39.

Current statistics of American foreign trade in tabulated form are printed annually in the "Statistical abstract of the United States." More detailed statistics are given in the annual report on "Foreign commerce and navigation of the United States," and similar statistics in monthly form appear in the "Monthly summary of commerce and finance of the United States." These are all published by the Bureau of statistics of the Department of commerce and labor. The consular reports of the United States and of Great Britain contain reports on specific subjects of commerce.

In the compilation of this list, it has not been considered feasible to include works concerned with the commodities which have been the subject of reciprocity unless they illustrate general principles; for example, sugar. This subject alone required a list of 238 pages, which shows the inadvisability of attempting to include works on commodities. The purpose, in brief, has been to present materials dealing with the principles and history of reciprocity.

The following were examined too late for inclusion in the body of the list:

Butler, Charles Henry. The treaty-making power of the United States.
New York: The Banks law pub. co., 1902. 2 vols. 8°.
See index under headings Commercial treaties, "Most favored nation" clause, Reciprocity, etc.

Tazewell, Littleton Waller. A review of the negociations between the United States of America and Great Britain, respecting the commerce of the two countries, and more especially concerning the trade of the former with the West Indies.
London: J. Murray, 1829. iv, 130, (2) pp. 8°.
Printed with the signature "Senex" in the Norfolk (Va.) herald.

United States. Supreme court. Field v. Clark. Appeal from the Circuit court of the United States for the Northern district of Illinois. Boyd v. United States. Sternbach v. United States. Appeals from the Circuit court of the United States for the Southern district of New York. Nos. 1052, 1049, 1050. Argued Nov. 30, Dec. 1, 2, 1891.—Decided Feb. 29, 1892.

(In its United States reports, vol. 143, pp. 649–700. New York, 1892. 8°.)

"The authority conferred upon the President by section 3 of the act of October 1, 1890, to reduce the revenue and equalize duties on imports, and for other purposes, 26 Stat. c. 1244, pp. 567, 612, to suspend by proclamation the free introduction of sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, when he is satisfied that any country producing such article imposes duties or other exactions upon the agricultural or other products of the United States, which he may deem to be reciprocally unequal or unreasonable, is not open to the objection that it unconstitutionally transfers legislative power to the President (Fuller, C. J., and Lamar, J., dissenting;) but even if it were it does not follow that other parts of the act imposing duties upon imported articles are inoperative."

Report by Hon. Elijah Ward.

"Without doubt the best report made on the subject up to that time."—Robinson, History of two reciprocity treaties, p. 80.

"The chief points for consideration are the extent, population, position, and resources of the British North American provinces and possessions; the present so-called 'reciprocity treaty'; the existing condition of our commercial and fiscal relations with Canada, and the line of policy most conducive to the interest and welfare of both countries; the tendencies of modern inventions and civilization on the intercourse of nations, including the leading principles of the German commercial union or Zollverein, and their applicability to the United States."

1862. Letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a tabular statement showing the quantity and value of the different articles of merchandise imported into the United States from the British North American colonies during the fiscal years ending June 30, 1859, 1860, and 1861, under the treaty of reciprocity. Report on a joint resolution requesting the President to negotiate with the government of Great Britain for the renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854.

"The committee . . . in recognition of the fact that the Constitution has prescribed that all measures affecting the revenues of the Government should originate in the House, consider it eminently fit that the House should give expression to its opinion regarding international agreements which may affect such revenues."

Resolution recommended, "That in opinion of the House, closer commercial relations with the other states on the American continent would be of mutual advantage, and that, should the Executive see fit to consider propositions for freer commerce with the Dominion of Canada, such negotiations would be viewed with favor."

"1. Customs duties—Cuban treaty—preferential duty. Cuban commercial convention, art. 2, 33 Stat. 2137, prescribes that Cuban products 'shall be admitted' at a reduction from the duty provided by the tariff act of 1897, 'or as may be provided by any tariff law of the United States subsequently enacted;' and article 8, 33 Stat. 2140, prescribes that 'the rates of duty herein granted * * * are and shall continue * * * preferential in respect to all like imports from other countries.' Held, that the reduction contemplated was from the rates provided in any general tariff law, and not from those in special laws, like the Philippine tariff act, or reciprocal commercial agreements."

"2. Same—'other countries'—Philippines. The Philippines are not another country, within the meaning of Cuban commercial convention, art. 8, 33 Stat. 2140, prescribing on importations from Cuba treatment preferential in respect to like imports from 'other countries.'"

United States. Supreme court. United States v. American sugar refining company. Appeal from the Circuit court of the United States for the Southern district of New York. No. 269. Argued Apr. 27, 1906.—Decided May 28, 1906.

(In its United States reports, vol. 202, pp. 563–580. New York, 1906. 8°.)

"Under the treaty between the United States and Cuba of December 11, 1902, and the act of Congress of December 17, 1903, imports from Cuba were not entitled to reduction of duties imposed by the tariff act of July 24, 1897, until December 27, 1903, the date proclaimed by the President of the United States and the President of Cuba for the commencement of the operation of the treaty."
